What is caregiver burnout and why should you care?

When faced with a prolonged illness or disability, many people require additional support from family members while receiving professional care at home. This additional mental, emotional and physical strain is often overlooked and can be detrimental to both the caregiver and the patient.

Frequently, these family caregivers experience burnout – meaning a state of emotional, physical or mental exhaustion – due to caring for their family member. In this state, caregivers may lose their resolve and resign their family member's care to professionals at a nursing home or hospital just to finally receive relief from their caregiving duties. This can result in additional straining of familial relationships and the unplanned financial toll of having to receive care at a professional facility.

Identity Discrepancy is the root cause of caregiver burnout, not caregiving itself.
